

S. W. Highway Called International Road Before State Road Commission

Marked enthusiasm for the completion of the Southwest Highway from Marley to Saunemin, a distance of 55 miles, was displayed before the Future Roads Commission which held a hearing on the Southwest Highway project in the Letting Room in the Centennial Building in Springfield last Friday morning. Several hundred ardent road boosters from points along the proposed route attended the hearing, among them being representatives, senators and mayors from the districts and towns through which the new Chicago to St. Louis route is to be located.

The hearing was opened with Dr. W. R. Schussler of Orland Park, president of the Southwest Towns Chamber of Commerce, making the opening address before the Commission, showing how much of the proposed highway has been completed, the territory it serves, that the new route is not a local one, but rather international in scope, as it will not only connect Chicago with St. Louis, but will also connect with Mexico City. Dr. Schussler showed that only 55 miles remain to be paved to complete the new route. This gap extends from Marley to Saunemin. He pointed out that the people along the proposed route are whole heartedly back of the movement to have the state finish paving this gap and that the representatives and senators and other officials in the various sections interested are back of the movement.

At the conclusion of the doctor's address, representatives from the various districts gave brief addresses in which everyone of them urged the Commission to consider the project favorably and pointed out that this highway when fully completed will be one of the most important in the entire state. Senator Fifer Bohrer of Bloomington was not able to be present, but sent word that she is heartily in favor of the Southwest Highway and she urged the Commission to report favorably on the project.

Only one question was raised during the hearing, this coming from State Engineer Frank Sheets, who inquired whether there would be any difficulty in securing the needed right of way, saying that if such were the case, the project might be defeated.

Representatives from Kankakee county made it very clear to Engineer Sheets that the right of way thru the county was pledged. Representative Michael Hennebray of Wilmington stated that so far as Will County is concerned the matter of right of way is assured. He made a very passionate plea to the Commission to consider the proposed project as of vital importance to the state characterizing the Southwest Highway as "the missing link" in the transportation system of the state. Other representatives from down state also stated that the matter of right of way was definitely settled as far as their respective districts are concerned.

Edward Wilson and Eugene Hoermann, both of Manhattan made a very convincing argument in favor of the new highway, showing that at present Manhattan is isolated from the rest of the state so far as rail transportation is concerned. The only train for Chicago leaves 5:15 in the morning and the only train back is at 11 o'clock at night. By having the Southwest Highway thru their town they would have easy access to Chicago and other points.

Representative Frank Foster of Harvey outlined the work that has been done on the Southwest Highway in Cook County and of its connection with Western avenue, making a convenient route into Chicago. He supported the project enthusiastically.

It was shown to the commission that the new route would cut off a distance of 45 miles between Chicago and St. Louis and would also relieve the present congestion on route 4, the most traveled road to Springfield and St. Louis today. By saving 45 miles between the two metropolitan centers, it is estimated the saving to the motoring public in gasoline would mean approximately $8,000 per day.

As outlined to the commission, the proposed road would not vary more than ten miles from east to west on a direct air line route between the two cities.

The road sponsors declared that 80 per cent of the new highway is completed now, partly in Cook county and south of Saunemin.

The proposed route would connect Chicago and St. Louis via Manhattan, Will County; Emington, Livingston County; Bellflower, McLean County; Decatur, Macon County; Taylorville, Christian County; Litchfield, Montgomery county; Mt. Olive, and Staunton in Macoupin County; Edwardsville, and Granite City in Madison County and then to St. Louis.

The stretch still needed for the right of way is from Marley in Will County where the Southwest highway at present joins the Maple road, to Saunemin in Livingston County.

The mayor of Decatur favors the Southwest highway and made a very impressive address in its behalf.

Will County was represented at this hearing by Representative M. Hennebray, Wilmington; Edward Wil-

Deplore Appeal To Gangland to Aid Justice

Deplored the present breakdown of governmental machinery which has been so recently demonstrated in the tragic Lindbergh case, James A. Howell, Loyola Law Professor and candidate for democratic nomination for representative in Congress for the Eleventh District, issued a statement today appealing to the citizens to aid in the return to the fundamental principles of good government which made this nation the proudest on earth.

"The total collapse of our public officials and their inability to function which led to the appeal to the oligarchy of gangland to enforce justice, is perhaps one of the greatest confessions of failure ever made by any established government," said Mr. Howell.

"My sympathy and the sympathy of every American," he continued, "are with Colonel and Mrs. Lindbergh, for the hope of the speedy restoration to their side of their infant son in this tragedy. Yet there is another colossal tragedy too, the tragedy of the criminal oligarchy administering the laws of our nation."

Mr. Howell then went on to state that unless the elements of crime, which have been so steadily nurtured by the prohibition farce, are removed, the complete deterioration of law and order and of our constitution could be the only logical effect from this cause.

Purchase of Sandwich Traps Supposed Murderer

Trial for murder faces Frank Schanda, 1215 Fifteenth st., Maywood, because he bought a sandwich in the food stand at the four corners north of Frankfort where William Schmook was slain January 10th this year.

Schmook resisted two holdup men and was shot as the proprietor's daughter, Elizabeth McMullen looked on.

Last Friday night, Schanda appeared. Miss McMullen, alone, served him. As he left driving across the street to get air for his car, Edward Gast, state highway policeman entered. Miss McMullen told him.

Schanda offered Gast $500 to let him go, according to the policeman, but was refused. Then he offered all he had—$2,200 and a diamond pin. Gast took him to the Will County Jail where Miss McMullen identified him. He was arraigned Saturday before Magistrate Nicholson of Joliet.

Legionaires Favor Service Payment

Three million six hundred thousand adjusted service certificates are held by that number of veterans of the World War. These veterans reside in every nook and corner of America. The average value of the certificates is $1,000. The certificates do not represent a bonus; they represent an honest debt that has been confessed by Congress for services rendered. Each holder of a certificate was really due an amount equal to the face or maturity value of his certificate October 1, 1931. Two billion two hundred million dollars will pay this debt in full.

If it is paid now, the entire Nation will be benefitted by the additional purchasing power being placed into the hands of so many consumers who will put it into circulation. It will not be hoarded.

We have sufficient idle gold in the Treasury of the United States to authorize the issuance of Treasury notes—legal-tender currency—to pay this debt in full. Experts tell us that our country needs a moderate expansion of the currency. In this way the debt can be paid without a bond issue, without increasing taxes, and without additional interest payments. The debt must be paid some time. Everybody will be helped if it is paid now.

Thru the cooperation of the Veterans of Foreign Wars a statement has been prepared which shows the amount of money that will be paid to the veterans in each county in each state in the United States if H. R. 1, the full payment bill, becomes a law. This statement shows the amount due after deducting prior loans and interest on these loans. You may examine the statement and determine for yourself the question which will promote the general welfare of the people of this nation to the greatest extent, the payment of this money now or permit the banks and the Government to consume it by compound interest? Hqn. Wright Patman of Texas has made speeches in favor of the above in Washington and the Legion boys in this section are anxious to see this bill become a law.

In an address at Bloomington, Lewis B. Springer, superintendent of the division of forestry, state department of conservation, declared that sportsmen and farmers should unite their efforts in forest fire prevention to protect their common interests. According to Superintendent Springer, the forestry division is endeavoring to develop fire protection for more than half a million acres of Illinois woodland. Fully half of the woods fires take place in the spring when farmers are cleaning up their fields. Since farmers own the majority of timber in Illinois, they lose not only their timber through these woods fires, but also the advantages that these woods may have as a place for raising game and birds.

Employment of 50 more workmen a day and an increase in the working schedule from three to four days a week has been announced by the Mable Iron works at Danville.

The Century Wall Paper mills of Decatur will not find it necessary to close down this spring. The plant is running full time and employs a force of 175 men.

Construction of three waterway bridges will begin near Joliet in March and April, according to an announcement of Col. Dan I. Sultan, army engineer in charge of waterway work in that area.

Nearly 400 old employees of the Pullman shops have returned to work with prospects for steady employment for the next two or three months. The men were hired at the Chicago plant because of a rush order to repair cars and will be employed until the order is completed.

At Joliet employment in the manufacturing industries showed an increase during January. Pay rolls also showed an increase in Joliet.

Building booms have started in five downstate cities. Substantial increases in this industry during the month of January as compared with December are shown and three cities registered increases over January, 1931. The cities that reported increases over December were: Batavia, Bloomington, Joliet, East St. Louis and Rockford.

The bills providing for the relief for the unemployed in Cook county have been passed by the house and senate and have been signed by Gov. Louis L. Emmerson. This was a matter of considerable importance to every citizen of Illinois. Many ways were planned to give the necessary relief and after very careful consideration the plan adopted by the house and senate was considered to be the best that could be worked out; therefore, every member of the house or senate who voted for the passage of these bills is to be complimented.

JESUS COMFORTS HIS DISCIPLES

LESSON TEXT—John 14:1-18.
GOLDEN TEXT—Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you: not as the world giveth, give I unto you. Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Plans a Home in Heaven.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus Plans a Home in Heaven.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Jesus Comforts His Disciples.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Jesus Comforts His Disciples.

The hopes of the disciples were utterly shattered when Jesus told them about the cross. He had told them that he was going away and that they could not follow him. He consoled them by

I. Pointing to the Coming Reunion in the Father's House (vv. 1-3).

1. He asked them to trust in himself even as God (v. 1). Faith in the God-man, Christ Jesus, will steady the heart, no matter how intense the grief or how great the sorrow. Faith in God and Christ is one and the same thing, for Jesus Christ is not merely another God, but one with God. Christ himself is divine and therefore the revealer of divinity. Jesus Christ is the same object of trust as God himself. The believer should repose in him the same confidence and yield unto him the same submission as to God. Trust in Jesus as God is the secret of a quiet heart.

2. He informed them that he was going to the Father's house to prepare a home for them (v. 2). Heaven is the Father's house. Heaven is an eternal dwelling place. There is in it abundant room for all. There are "Many mansions." All who come to God through Christ will find room.

It is a prepared place for a prepared people.

3. He assured them that he would come again and escort them to the Father's house (v. 3). Jesus will not wait for his own to come to him, but will come and call forth from the graves those who have died and transform living believers, taking them all to be with himself forevermore in the heavenly home.

II. Revealing the Way to the Father's House (vv. 4-11).

Jesus informed the disciples that they knew the way to that place to which he was going. To this Thomas interposed a doubt, in answer to which Christ asserts that he is

1. The way to God (v. 6). He is something more than a mere guide or teacher—he is the way itself. He is the door of the sheepfold—the very entrance to the tree of life.

2. The truth (v. 6). He is not merely the teacher, but the truth incarnate. In Christ's incarnation the spiritual and material worlds were united. Therefore, every line of truth, whether spiritual or material, converges in him. No one can ever have the real truth about anything who does not have Jesus Christ. In him we have especially the truth about God. To pretend to know God while at the same time rejecting Jesus Christ is utter folly. Only as Christ reveals God can we know him (John 1:18).

3. The life (v. 6). Christ is not merely the giver of life, but he is the essence of life. Only those who receive Christ have life in the truest sense.

III. Assuring Them That His Work Was to Continue (vv. 12-14).

Jesus' going away was not to end the work which he had begun. This, no doubt, means that through the ministry of the Spirit-filled disciples the work which Christ began would assume larger proportions. There would be a much greater number of conversions than under his ministry. The means by which they were to get the power to do such wonders was prayer. God will surely answer prayer, not only because he loves his children, but through answered prayer his own name will be glorified.

IV. Promising Another Comforter (vv. 12-17).

The word "Comforter" means literally "one called to the side of another to give help, protection and deliverance." This Comforter is the Holy Spirit. Jesus was the Comforter while here on earth. The Holy Spirit was to be "another" Comforter. The condition upon which they might enjoy the comfort of the Spirit was obedience to Jesus (vv. 15-17).

V. Assuring Them of His Return to Them (vv. 18-24).

Although Jesus went away he did not leave his disciples as orphans. He is spiritually present all the time. The Father and the Son make their abode with the disciple who loves and obeys Jesus Christ.

Trust the Lord

Difficulties afford opportunities for learning God's faithfulness, which otherwise we should not have. It gives me great comfort to remember that the work is his; that he knows how best to carry it on, and is infinitely more interested in it than we are. His word shall not return unto him void; we will preach it then, and leave results with him.—Hudson Taylor.

Gratitude is the continuous echo which our hearts give to God's mercy.

Safe Food Economy

Although you may save money on food, you must be certain to include the essential elements of diet. Vitamins A and D are necessary in your meals. These are found in Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil. "A" builds resistance, and helps old and young guard against winter colds. "D" aids in growth and the development of children's bones and teeth. In this emulsion these vitamins may be had in a form easy and pleasing for children and adults to take. Use daily during winter. Scott & Bowne, Bloomfield, N. J. Sales Representative, Harold F. First Aid-Home Remedy Week

Chicago, Ill.—"Insure Yourself Against Needless Suffering!" is the intensive slogan of personal action which prefaces national announcement that the eleventh anniversary of First Aid-Home Remedy Week has been fixed for March 13-19. The National Association of Retail Druggists, sponsors of the plan which Sterling Products, Inc., dedicated to the drug world in 1922, is joined in this campaign for nation wide preparation to meet unexpected accident and sudden illness, by the National Wholesale Druggists' Association and the National Association of Retail Drug Clerks. For the first time all State Pharmaceutical Associations are also co-operating for greater preparedness for the physical emergencies of life. Several governors and mayors of municipalities have by proclamation called attention to the week which has enjoyed a decade of increasing success. "Fill That Medicine Chest Now!" is the command that has been made from the first week to the present campaign, and all of them have been timed during housecleaning days. Secretary S. C. Henry of the N. A. R. D. in an awakening suggestion to the retail druggists predicts record-breaking co-operation this year when the week affords opportunity for live wire druggists everywhere to use timely advertising in their local newspapers and thus insure additional sales in a helpful effort to maintain volume.

Dr. Pierce's Pellets are best for liver, bowels and stomach. One little Pellet for a laxative—three for a cathartic.—Adv.

Don't Buy Medicine for Stomach Trouble

Accept Bottle Konjola FREE

TO SUFFERERS FROM STOMACH TROUBLE

I want to give every person who suffers from stomach trouble a bottle of America's most famous medicine FREE to try. Particularly those people who have tried many medicines without results. Simply fill out the coupon below and use it. Do this in your own interest.

Why Made

I make this offer because I believe Konjola will help sufferers amazingly. That is, that it will help considerably, over half the people who try it. And that they will keep on using it. I want no money from those it does not help.

You've heard about Konjola. Know that everywhere people tell wonderful stories about it. Know that so many people use it that it is often shipped to many communities in carload lots. Never in the history of proprietary medicine has a remedy swept from one end of America to the other like it has. Now—so that everybody may try it—I propose to give it away. Hence, nobody can lose finding out whether it benefits or not. So it is folly not to try it.

What Konjola Is

Konjola is a mixture of some thirty-two ingredients; twenty-two of extracts of nature's own roots and herbs, and not one a habit-forming drug.

Now—the functional goal of these herbs and medical ingredients is to mix with the food in the stomach—shortly after you eat—in the effort to help nature throw off the poisons of stomach troubles, rheumatism and neuritis, and to permit the kidneys and liver to function properly.

So amazing are the stories told about Konjola by those who claim virtual miracles for it, that it is today taken by probably more people than any other medicine America has ever known. What its exact science tiffe status is nobody knows. But what its possible effects may be makes one of the most amazing recitals in modern-day health annals.

G. H. MOSBY, Noted Compounder of Famous Medicine, Konjola, Who Chooses Peak of Depression to Distribute His Medicine on Purely Trial Basis to the Public.

Try It FREE

Now, whether Konjola will do for you what so many thousands of others have claimed it has done for them—whether it will ease your pain in a day or a week—remains to be seen. But in light of the tremendous Public Acclamation given it, it is certainly a mistake not to try it.

Clip the coupon now. Do it before you forget. Accept a FREE bottle of America's most famous family medicine to try. Find out for yourself whether or not it will help you. Do this in fairness to yourself and your family. Konjola is on sale, too, at all drug stores, if you want to get a bottle today instead of waiting for a bottle by mail. Just ask your druggist for Konjola.

(Signed) G. H. MOSBY, President—Konjola, Inc. Copr. 1933, Frank Ronnell Receiver for Konjola, Inc.

Further along the road are incidents of great moment when read in relation to Washington's after life. At a place called Oak Grove, near Wakefield, he was advised by a Mr. Williams to take up the study of surveying. Next, in Marye School which stood on the site now occupied by the First Baptist Church in Fredericksburg, he began the reading and practice of "Rules of Civility" -- minor incidents, perhaps, but watch for their unfolding later in the Washington mind.

Taxes Constantly Mounting Says Judge Henry Horner

The two-weeks downstate campaign tour of Judge Henry Horner, regular Democratic candidate for governor, was well underway when he arrived in Danville from Kankakee, where he made his opening address the past week.

Judge Horner declared that there would be no "pussyfooting" on the vital questions affecting the welfare of the people of the State of Illinois. An outline of his stand on the following principal issues of the campaign:

Judge Henry Horner

State Expenditures—"In the administration of our state, there must be the most stringent economy. All public officials must be made strictly accountable for the expenditures entrusted to their charge. There must be a complete survey of all state departments, costs to the taxpayer must be sharply reduced, and public service improved where ever possible."

Taxation—"Our people are staggering under a terrific burden of taxation which is constantly mounting. An addition to our tax bills comes almost automatically with every convening of our legislature. The time has come when this must be checked. Taxes must come sharply downward."

Bruce Campbell of East St. Louis, non-factional candidate for the Democratic nomination for governor is visiting the counties in Illinois outside of Cook County again this week. In the past two weeks he has been in 28 of the counties of downstate, where he finds sentiment strongly for him, he says.

In his speeches, Mr. Campbell is insisting that the fight for the nomination is between him and Mayor Anton Cermak's candidate Judge Henry Horner. Mr. Campbell is stressing his independence from factional politics and his freedom from the fight over Cook County political supremacy, which he is leaving to the Cook County candidates.

Flower Show Premium Lists Being Prepared

Premium lists are now being distributed by the Allied Florists Association offering cash prizes for cut flowers and potted plant exhibits by professionals in the Spring Flower Show of the Garden Club of Illinois which is to be held April 2 to 7 on the Navy Pier.

Chicago is the largest commercial flower production center in the country and this year the professionals promise to exhibit their finest blossoms in co-operation with the Garden Clubs. Flowering and foliage plants will also be displayed. Some of the larger classes are:

Group of rose plants covering 150 square feet, arranged for effect; group of tulips covering 100 square feet; display of cut roses covering 200 square feet; display of carnations covering 150 square feet. An exhibit of hybrid orchids of rare beauty, many of which have never been seen in Chicago, will be staged.

In addition, more than forty smaller garden exhibits exemplifying the solution of specific garden problems will be made by Garden Clubs, providing a vista of gardens more than 1,000 feet long.

Junior Garden Club exhibits will this year be more numerous and require more space. A group of play houses with gardens surrounding them will be one feature.

The advance ticket campaign in charge of Mrs. Jos. E. Callender is well under way. Many thousands of money saving tickets have been placed. It is anticipated that over 100,000 of these tickets will be disposed of before the opening of the Show. A record attendance is assured.

Pure Milk Asso. preparing Program for Annual Meet

Harry Hartke, president of the National Producers Federation, and for many years a leader in the co-operative movement among dairy farmers, has been secured to address the Seventh Annual Meeting of the Pure Milk Association in Chicago at the Auditorium Theatre, March 15th.

Mr. Hartke is also president of the Cincinnati Milk Producers Association in which territory he operates his own farm. He is especially well equipped to advise dairymen with their marketing problems because he not only is an experienced farmer but is also known as an outstanding business man thru his ownership and management of a furniture factory.

Mr. Hartke will have a message of importance to deliver. Because he is in constant contact with other markets thruout the United States the picture of co-operative bargaining by milk producers presented by him will be complete and accurate. Dinner tickets have been mailed to local secretaries, who in turn, will sell them to the members and save them the trouble of purchasing such tickets at the door of the dining room the day of the meeting.

"We expect a larger crowd this year than has ever previously attended an annual meeting of our organization," declares Director of Public Relations A. M. Krah.

U. of I. to Effect Enormous Saving

President Chase Says Many Normal Activities Retarded and Curtailed.

By the end of the academic year, September 1, the University of Illinois will have effected savings of several hundred thousand dollars, President H. W. Chase has announced. These savings are being made through curtailing many normal activities, it was explained.

"The University has practically stopped all except the absolutely necessary expenditures," Dr. Chase said. "Like all enterprises these days, we are economizing in every possible direction. The stopping of replacement of equipment, repairs, buildings, and cuts in normal expenditures of every sort, are necessitated, by the general business situation," he said.

"The general situation in the State and in the country calls for everybody's co-operation. We are running for the remainder of the year on several hundred thousand dollars less than the amount authorized by the Legislature."

"On account of the condition of the State Treasury we have postponed indefinitely the building of our second medical unit in Chicago, for which the last Legislature appropriated $1,000,000. "Next year's operations are already being planned on a reduced basis," Dr. Chase said. "Studies are being made of possible modifications in academic requirements and methods of instruction and administration with a view to reducing costs."

"The University Trustees are deeply concerned that the University should avoid at this time every expenditure that can possibly be postponed or curtailed. Most of the time and thought of University officials are going to these matters, and I am glad to say that the spirit of the faculty is highly co-operative."

STATE'S FUTURE BIGGEST ISSUE, CUSTER ASSERTS

Launches Campaign in Downstate

Republican Candidate for Governor Pledges Economy in Government and Tax Reform.

SHELBYVILLE, March 9.—Declaring that he will not be diverted from the main issue of economy and tax reform by any question which does not have to do with state administration, Omer N. Custer, Republican candidate for Governor, this week began his downstate campaign.

"I refuse to follow the lead of other candidates," Mr. Custer said here today, "in trying to work on the prejudices of the people by discussing national issues. I will not talk on the tariff, the League of Nations, the cancellation of foreign loans or repeal of the Eighteenth amendment. These questions are not pertinent in a campaign for state office."

Says Reforms Imperative.

"The issue here is what we can do to restore our governments to a state of solvency, to make real estate again desirable as an investment and to make it possible for industry and agriculture to carry on without paying out excessive proportions of their earnings for taxes."

"I say to you in all earnestness that unless we show some intelligence in solving this problem, we are facing ruin."

"The only adequate solution possible is the revamping and reorganization of our entire governmental system. This applies to state government and to all local governments as well."

Launches Downstate Drive.

Mr. Custer launched his drive at a gathering of Iroquois county residents held at Watseka at noon Monday. In the evening, he discussed campaign issues at a rally of Vermilion, Edgar and Clark county residents held at Danville. Yesterday in a midday address at Champaign, he spoke to residents of Champaign, Douglas and Piatt counties. In the evening he addressed a meeting at Bloomington, then hurried to Decatur to deliver his second speech of the evening. Residents of McLean, Macon, Livingston, Ford, DeWitt, Logan, Woodford and Tazewell counties attended these two meetings.

Today saw the tour swing into Shelby county, where Mr. Custer addressed a large assemblage in Shelbyville at noon. Many residents of Moultrie county also were present for this address. In the evening, with Mattson as the center of activities, Mr. Custer speaks to residents of Coles county and the nearby counties of Shelby, Effingham and Cumberland.

Will Continue His Tour.

The remainder of Mr. Custer's downstate tour will carry him through Little Egypt, through central and western Illinois and into North Central Illinois.

This part of the itinerary, with the date, place of meeting and counties which will send delegations to each meeting follows:

U. of I. Shows Dairymen Way to Added Income of Twenty Millions

Illinois is recognized as the first state in the country to work out in dollars and cents the economic difference in the production of cows and put it in such comprehensive shape that it had a practical application to every dairy farm. The latest development in this work is some new figures worked out by Prof. C. S. Rhode, dairy extension specialist of the College of Agriculture, University of Illinois, which add new strength to the early evidence.

He has shown that approximately $20,000,000 could be added to the annual income of Illinois farmers keeping dairy cattle and no more milk would be put on the market if the 1,000,000 cows in the state were replaced by 654,239 cows as good as the average cows in the dairy herd improvement associations.

Fifty-five of these associations organized in 73 counties by the agricultural extension service of the University of Illinois are helping herd owners increase their net returns. They supply dairymen at low cost with production and feed records and give them help on feeding and management problems. Prof. Rhode's figures were derived from records on 12,894 of the association cows.

The pioneer work which the university did in this field many years ago showed that under ordinary farm conditions the cow producing 5,000 pounds of milk and 200 pounds of fat in a year makes her owner only about one-fourth as much profit as the cow giving 8,000 pounds of milk and 230 pounds of fat. Thus, a 60 per cent increase in production means a 400 per cent increase in profits.

The latest figures compiled show that a cow has to give about 250 pounds of butterfat a year before she returns enough to pay for her feed and an equal amount to cover other expenses. At present the average cow in the state produces 180 pounds of butterfat a year.

This is evidence that under present low prices higher efficiency in production and improved feeding practices as worked out and recommended by the university are essential for satisfactory returns.

Illinois Newspaper File

Newspaper publishers in Illinois are assisting the University of Illinois Library in assembling the best set of Illinois newspapers in the United States. Since 1911 the University has been receiving about 220 newspapers as the gift of their publishers. Because of their historical value in the future, the Library assembles and binds the papers in permanent files. They are available for students, faculty, and citizens.

Within the last few years a great many citizens have come from all parts of the state to use the files.

"These newspapers are not for current use, but are preserved for the use of students, faculty, and citizens," Director P. L. Windsor, said.

When Will the Elevator Cable, or the Axle of Your Car Break?

It has long been known that metals under repeated tension or stress would fail in a short time if the impacts or tension were repeated regularly. University of Illinois engineers have revealed heretofore unknown facts about the structural parts of metal. The application of these known facts to engineering and manufacturing methods has been an invaluable aid to mankind. Above is shown a machine for testing a piece of metal. The insert shows an actual breakdown in the metal, magnified 1,000 times.

Geologists Aid State Industries

Survey Seeks Data to Help Illinois Mineral Industries.

Because of the decline in value of minerals produced in Illinois during the last decade and because new problems are constantly presenting themselves for solution, the State Geological Survey, located on the University of Illinois campus, is now securing data regarding the adaptability of Illinois materials, further uses for them, and information concerning the economic factors involved.

Its new program looks toward a fuller exploitation of the state's mineral resources in the future, and an intensive mineral research program which aims to give new life to Illinois mineral industries is already under way.

Headed by its chief, Dr. M. M. Leighton, the Geological Survey is already:

(1) Securing and making available scientific and economic information essential to the nourishment and promotion of the State's mineral industries and helpful to the public welfare.

(2) Investigating thoroughly the constitution and properties of the mineral and rock substances, such as is needed to light the way for improved uses and new uses.

(3) Bringing the fundamental information to the point where it can be of immediate use to industrial organizations and individuals in successfully and profitably exploiting the mineral deposits to the fullest extent.

Frigidaire Prices

Being Reduced

Frigidaire Corporation has announced sweeping price reductions on its complete line of household refrigerators. The lowest priced model, the ML-4 is listed at $130 at the factory.

The drastic reductions were made as a result of a nation wide survey which indicated that there are hundreds of people who would like to own a Frigidaire, but have deferred its actual purchase because of price according to H. W. Newell, vice president in charge of sales, who made the announcement.

"This information has convinced us that such people who are already familiar with the superior features of our product, will want to place orders immediately, when they learn of these new prices, which shatter all former standards in the electric refrigeration industry," he said.

"In line with General Motors policy of passing savings on to the consumer we have anticipated the economies in manufacturing that can be effected by greatly increased production and are offering the public the advantage of these savings in advance."

HONAN-FU NEWEST CAPITAL OF CHINA

Was Seat of Government When Paper Was Invented.

Washington.—News dispatches that are beginning to reach the world with the date line "Loyang," "Luan" or "Honan-fu" are coming from a city that has become China's newest capital but which once served as the seat of Chinese government long before telegraphy was dreamed of, according to a bulletin from the National Geographic society.

"The city with three names is most commonly known as 'Honan-fu,' meaning 'Honan City,'" says the bulletin. "It lies in the province of Honan about twenty miles south of the Yellow river. There is good reason for such a site rather than location directly on the great river. This stream emerges from the highlands, a few miles to the west, and from that point on becomes 'China's Sorrow,' an erratic river that is forever changing its course. Few cities are built within its treacherous reach.

Not Easily Accessible.

"Headquarters of the Chinese regime that has been centered at Nanking were moved to Honan-fu because of the relative inaccessibility of the latter place to invading forces. Nanking, situated directly on the Yangtze, is in easy reach by ocean-going gunboats.

"The situation of the new capital in relation to the more familiar cities of China, can be best understood, perhaps, by an American comparison. Shanghai, great commercial center near the mouth of the Yangtze (although actually a few miles up a tributary) may be compared to New Orleans. Nanking, farther up the Yangtze, has a situation comparable to Vickburg, Miss. Honan-fu, to which the Nanking government archives and personnel have been moved, lies 400 miles to the northwest, in a position that can be likened to that of Oklahoma City.

"The Yellow river is not navigable anywhere near Honan-fu, so that there is no danger of attack by naval forces. The Peiping-Hankow railway, China's principal rail artery, lies about seventy-five miles east of the city. A branch line extends from it to Honan-fu.

"Honan province has figured importantly in Chinese history from the earliest times. It has even been suggested that Chinese culture had its birth in this region. At any rate, it was from Honan that the early culture spread southward to the Yangtze and eastward to the coast. The name means 'South of the River,' but an early nickname was 'Middle Flowery Land.' It was from this affectionate term for Honan that the name 'Middle Kingdom,' applicable to China, arose.

"Although off the route of river traffic and through rail traffic, Honan-fu has been for centuries on one of the most important of Chinese overland highways, the Great Northwest road. The portion of this road from Peiping to Honan province extends southward to the vicinity of Kaifeng, the provincial capital. It then runs along westward some twenty miles south of the Yellow river through Honan-fu, Shenchow and Sian; turns northwestward to Lan-chow, Liang-chow, and Su-chow; and extends on into Central Asia. Over it moves most of the commerce between Chinese Turkestan and China proper.

Typical Old City.

"Honan-fu has a population of about 20,000. It is a typical old city of the interior with a wall enclosing a cluster of narrow and dusty streets. About its gates at certain hours is a congestion of wheelbarrows, laden donkeys and vendors of food and tea. In the town is the first temple raised in China to Buddhism, the famous 'White Horse Temple.' On the site, it is said, was buried the white horse

THE PRACTICAL JOKER

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Emeritus Dean of Men,
University of Illinois.

Some foreign countries, as highly civilized as our own perhaps, once followed the beneficent custom of transporting out of the country citizens whose procedure was not in accordance with those principles which seemed to tend to the development of the best sort of society. Thieves and murderers and house breakers and those whose moral presence was objectionable were loaded into the proper sort of conveyance and gently deposited upon some remote shore from which escape was difficult or impossible. Thus isolated, many of them grew up into good citizens who practiced economy and built cities and forgot their criminal tendencies.

I am not at all sure but that it was an admirable way to get rid of objectionable characters for whom capital punishment would seem too severe or too lenient; I should at least recommend it for the man who points an alleged empty gun at your head and for the practical joker. I see no good reason why the practical joker should not be wiped out.

He has no sense of humor for humor really is kind, sympathetic, pleasant spirited. A humorous man has no intention of giving anyone pain or discomfort. He wants to laugh, it is true, but seldom at the victim of his joke but with him.

A freshman last Christmas, a thousand miles from home and too poor to make the journey across country, was desperately homesick. All his friends were gone, his boarding house was closed, and he was quite alone, away from home at Christmas for the first time in his life. A call came over the telephone and a man's voice spoke inviting the boy to dinner at the home of one of his professors. His gloom vanished, some one had thought of him. When he called at the professor's house no one was there. It was a practical joke which some keen-minded acquaintance had played upon him, and he had no recourse.

Funny, wasn't it?

on which were brought from India the first Buddhist scriptures.

"Honan-fu's experience as a Chinese capital has been a long and varied one. From 255 B. C. to 206 B. C. it was, under the name of Loyang, the capital of the Chin dynasty, from which the name 'China' is derived. After an interval of more than two centuries it again became in 25 A. D. the central seat of government for 200 years under the Han dynasty. It was while these patrons of literature ruled over China from Loyang that paper was invented and greatly stimulated literary developments. Once again, in 589, Loyang was made imperial capital and remained such for a quarter century.

"How materially the governing center of China has shifted is shown by Loyang's subsequent history. After other cities became the capitals of the empire, this ancient city was made a subordinate governmental center and served as the 'East Capital' from 618 to 907 A. D. From 960 to 1250, still subordinate, it was the 'West Capital.'

IMPROPER DIETING MENACE TO HEALTH

Leaves Victim Prey to Disease, Says Surgeon General.

Washington.—"There is one widespread practice which is undermining health throughout the country, particularly among women, on which, unfortunately, the public health service cannot secure statistics," said Hugh S. Cumming, surgeon general, United States public health service. "It is what is commonly known as dieting."

"It is not done on the advice of physicians but almost invariably on the initiative of the individual who practices it. Neither is it done for health, but for looks.

"It cannot be recorded that people die directly from dieting but thousands of deaths are attributable indirectly to improper and foolish 'dieting.' 'Dieting' simply to produce a slim figure lowers the subject's resistance and leaves her a prey to disease.

"Official reports for the year just closed show happily that the general health of the nation is improving. The tuberculosis curve, thanks largely to the vigorous fight conducted against the white plague, is dropping. A sad thing, however, is that there is too much of that dread disease showing up among young women from fifteen to twenty-four years of age.

"This may be attributed to several things on which there are different theories. One thing is sure, however, that is, woman's disdain for curves and her desire for a stream line body, to attain which she will sacrifice almost anything, is not helping her health.

"Diet fads, food fads, no butter, no bread, are the undoubted underlying cause of many a woman's ills. Good old-fashioned bread and butter is vastly preferable to many of the present-day food concoctions with which the foolish are fed.

"It is of no consequence to the city girl or matron, I suppose, how great assistance she could be in helping the farmer and Uncle Sam solve the problem of surplus wheat by including bread in her daily diet, but she should at least be interested in helping herself to health."

No sooner had the applause subsided than the board moved to abolish the title of "mayor," and the motion passed unanimously—even Nay voting his approval.

Neal's Mother Has Right Idea

Within a few months there will be no more feverish, bilious, headachy, constipated, pale and puny children. That prophecy would surely come true if every mother could see for herself how quickly, easily, and harmlessly the bowels of babies and children are cleansed, regulated, given tone and strength by a product which has proved its merit and reliability to do what is claimed for it to millions of mothers in over fifty years of steadily increasing use.

As mothers find out from using it how children respond to the gentle influence of California Fig Syrup by growing stronger, sturdier and more active daily they simply have to tell other mothers about it. That's one of the reasons for its overwhelming sales of over four million bottles a year.

A Western mother, Mrs. Neal M. Todd, 1701 West 27th St., Oklahoma City, Okla., says: "When my son, Neal, was three years old he began having constipation. I decided to give him California Fig Syrup and in a few days he was all right and looked fine again. This pleased me so much that I have used Fig Syrup ever since for all his colds or little upset spells. It always stops his trouble quick, strengthens him, makes him eat."

Always ask for California Fig Syrup by the full name and see that the cartoon bears the word "California." Then you'll get the genuine.

With an anxious inquiry in his bloodshot eyes, Bill asked:

"Say, Alan, why can't I go along on this trick? I'd give a leg to. I'm a. w. o. l. now. Haskell can't do much worse to me than he intends to do as it is."

After all that Bill had done for them, Alan hadn't the heart to refuse him. He asked Featherof:

"How about it—can we carry a third person?"

"Well, we maybe could. But I wouldn't like . . . It'd cut down our gas load, and this is only a two-place plane."

"Then I'll not go," Bill agreed sturdily. "Don't want to be a drag. I'll sleep off my dry-jag here and then mosey in to Endurance."

Alan went after two more drums. As he reached the plant with them, his ears caught a faint low drone barely audible far out upon En Traverse. Standing up on the cockpit edge, he turned his glasses north.

Six miles out, the powerful scarlet-and-gold launch was heading straight toward them.

"Knock off on that!" he jabbed at Buzzard. "We've got to get gone. They'll ram us, or shoot at us from protection of the launch. You've got enough in the tank to take us to the Alooska. We'll stow these drums aboard, and what we can't take we'll leave here on this headland. Can get it later."

Under Buzzard's directions they worked frantically. When they were ready, when Bill clambered down into the canoe and held out his hand in good-by, Alan was struck to the heart by the pleading unspoken prayer which Bill stoutly refused to word.

"Buzzard!" He jerked around to his flight partner. "Bill's got to go along! D—d if I can leave him out in the cold! I simply can't do it."

"Then try to wedge him in with you. We'll carry him, if we have to tie him on!"

Alan pulled him up. Bill managed to squeeze into the tiny one-place compartment, and by that act deserted the Mounted Police.

With the big boat only a mile out, Buzzard taxied the plane and headed it parallel to the shore line. It seemed to Alan that the White Speedair, heavily laden with gas and oil and a third man, would never rise from the water. It taxied nearly a half-mile before it began smacking the wavelets. The police boat swerved right and diagonaled in to cut across its course. White puffs of smoke were bursting from a rifle in the prow, from a rifle in the hands of George Haskell.

But when the plane finally did take hold of the air, it left the boat behind in a twinkling. Roaring out of range, it swung away into the northeast, toward its goal on the Big Alooska.

CHAPTER X

The Secret of Many Waters

Two miles down river Buzzard throttled the motor, eased the stick forward and glided expertly down and down into that difficult narrow lane of evergreens.

Alan started to get out the canvas canoe to tow the plane in to the landing; but Joyce, understanding, untied her father's sturdier craft, laid in an extra paddle, and came skirling out toward them.

As Alan clambered down upon a float and waited, he remembered his decision to tell Joyce what had happened within him since he saw her last, and to tell her of that inexorable circumstance which had led to his engagement to Elizabeth. Easy that decision then, but he wavered now. Did he dare tell her that? If it was useless, if she had put him out of her life, did he dare resurrect all the poignant memories and intimacies between them? Today he would find out how she regarded him; today she would surely give him some clear token.

Reaching out, he caught the prow of her canoe. Joyce rose and stepped up. . . . In another instant he was clasping her hand.

"Joyce! Joyce! I was afraid for you—here alone, girl. I can't tell you how glad—when I saw you . . . And glad to be back here."

As their eyes met, as Alan felt her small hand warm in his, he was torn between fear. In that first moment of their meeting, when impressions stood out so sharp and clear, it seemed that all passion had gone out of Joyce's manner toward him. She greeted him warmly, she was friendly, even cordial, but in the same way as she would have met Bill Hardsock or Pedneault or Larry.

Introducing her to Buzzard, he stepped down into the canoe, lapped the painter rope around a strut; and together he and she guided the plane athwart current to the landing. After mooring it securely and getting part of their personal duff, the four of them, with old Pence appointing himself guard over the machine, went up the path to the trading store.

Alan could fairly feel the dozen eager questions Joyce wanted to ask him: Who was this new-found friend whom he called Buzzard? Where had they got this plane? How did they intend to use it against those bandits? But practical little soul as always, she asked no questions then. The three men, tired and hungry and desperately in need of rest, were her first consideration. Going back to the kitchen, she heated them water to wash and shave, and set about getting a hot substantial meal.

Alan happened to notice that his picture, which for two years had stood on Joyce's dresser, was not there now. It halted him like a blow. Why had she taken it down? Was it some accident, entirely innocent? Or . . .

Back in the kitchen, while Buzzard was outside washing away the grime and oil of five days' flight, he remembered the ceinture flechee and found it and brought it to Joyce.

"I thought of you, out in Edmonton," he said awkwardly, breaking the string. "I believed you might like this, Joyce. It isn't much, but I was short of . . . I was pretty near broke."

As Joyce unfolded the sash-belt and saw its exquisite beauty, an admiration leaped into her eyes. "Oh, it's beautiful! It's the loveliest I've ever seen anywhere."

But then, as she looked from the gift to the giver, something seemed to check her. With an effort she forced herself to say quietly, "It was kind of you, Alan, to think of me."

Alan turned away in bitter disappointment. "It was kind of you . . ." How cold and distant those words sounded. She was talking to him across an abyss.

When Buzzard and he came back in, they sat down to their meal. As she passed them food and the three of them talked, Alan could not help noticing Buzzard's quick ardent admiration of Joyce. Buzzard kept glancing at her, studying her intently, evidently astonished to find a pretty, well-educated girl like her living almost alone here in this far-northern wilderness.

Later, when Joyce had insisted on their getting a few hours of rest and had left them in her father's room, he remarked:

"There's one lucky devil in this world, Baker. The man that Miss MacMillan's going to marry."

Alan winced. He had never thought of Joyce marrying another man. The remark aroused a passionate unreasoning hurt in him.

Sitting at the edge of the bed, Buzzard smoked a cigarette and glanced nervously at his partner who had lain down and was trying to get a little rest to fit himself for the flight and battle just ahead. Something was wrong between Alan and this winsome, spirited Joyce MacMillan. There was, or had been, some passionate relationship between them. It had evidently gone on the rocks: Baker was engaged to some girl at Fort Endurance; and Miss MacMillan . . . Well, there was that incident which he himself had seen half an hour ago when he happened to glance through the window.

"It's a pity," he thought, "for them to bust up. A d—d shame, that's

Similiarity of Surnames in Old English Village

Northamptonshire can boast of a village in which one-third of the inhabitants possess the same surname. This is Bozeat, which has a population of just over 1,000. Nearly 300 of them have the surname of Drage.

Many villages and small towns can show surprising numbers of a few surnames amongst their inhabitants, but nowhere else is such a large percentage of people with the same name to be found.

It is difficult to discover how it all happened. Surnames are a comparatively modern institution, for in the old days there were none. To distinguish between two Williams, one might be referred to as William, Robert's what. She's a regular girl. Looks, personality and spunk. . . . Lord, I'd hate to ever quarrel with her!"

He wondered whether to tell Alan about that incident he'd seen. Alan was evidently floundering around in the dark about Miss MacMillan. He was a bit awkward and blundered in such matters. Buzzard thought:

"First chance I get, believe I'll tell him what she did. He ought to know. She either loves him or hates him, to do a thing like that!"

When Alan woke up, late in the evening, Buzzard was still asleep and Bill Hardsock was dead to the world. Hoping to find Joyce, he went out into the trading hall.

Joyce was not there. For a few moments Alan stood looking about. As Bill had told him, she was closing out the post. He hated to think of Joyce's girlhood home being sold to some utter stranger. Thinking of Larry, soon to be invalided out of service and condemned to a life of intolerable idleness, he wondered whether he might not get this post for his crippled patrol partner. It was well located, and Larry's host of friends among the Indians would be sure to bring him their furs.

Still hunting Joyce, he went down to the landing where old Pence, whittling at his story-stick, was guarding the plane against any log floating down and damaging it.

"You riz up early, Alan b'y."

"Yes. Got a couple things to do. They must've been on my mind. Where's Joyce?"

"She went down th' river bank, down thar t' that fust brook comin' out'n th' timber, to snag some trout. We're shy on meat."

Alan stepped into Dave MacMillan's canoe, laid in an extra paddle, and started down stream. Gliding around the first bend, he saw Joyce two hundred yards ahead, standing on a jutting rock beside a brook mouth. When he came alongside and lifted the canoe prow out upon the shelving rock, she greeted him with a quiet friendly smile. They sat down together on the wolf-foot moss.

After his days in the plane, with the swish of hurtling struts and the thunder of a motor dining his ears, it was incredibly quiet on the spruce-buried stream.

Very observant, he covertly stared at Joyce. She was looking past him at the far shore and woods. As he studied her features, it seemed to Alan that something profound had happened to her since he saw her last. She had changed; she was hardly the same girl. There was some new strange spiritual quality about her, as of a person who has gone down into a ravaging sickness and has had the strength to conquer and rise out of it, but at a terrible cost.

To break the silence between them he began telling her of these last weeks—his trip to Edmonton, his providential luck in meeting Buzzard, the prison charges that stood against them, their flight back north, their escape from Haskell's trap, his gladness when he saw her running down the path.

As she listened, thoroughly alive to the danger and hardships he had gone through, Joyce felt a profound gratitude, for she knew Alan had done this largely for her sake. When he mentioned the prison charges facing him, she experienced a moment of panic; and imagined herself testifying in his behalf, fighting for him as he had fought for her.

A little later, after they had discussed plans for closing in upon the bandits, Alan rose up and gave her his hand to rise. He said:

"I've got to go down river a few miles, Joyce. Bill cached some supplies near that saut where you and I got upset that day and had to swim for it. I want to bring them up here this evening."

He waited a moment for some hint that she might wish to go along with him. None came. He suggested:

"I'd take only a couple hours. If you'd care to, I'd like for you to go."

"I'd better stay. Bill and Mr. Featherof will be awake before long. I'll have supper ready when you get back."

"I can help you with that—if you'll go."

In Memoriam

IN FOND and loving memory of our beloved mother, Margaret Oestreich, who passed away March 12,
 1931 at her home in Joliet.

Farewell dear mother, sweet thy rest,
 Weary with years and worn with pain,
 Farewell, till in some happy place
 We shall behold thy face again.
 'Tis ours to miss thee, all our years,
 And tender memories of thee keep
 Thine in the Lord to rest, for so,
 He giveth his beloved sleep.
